John's Song

for John Taggart

If ever there is
if ever, if ever
there is, if ever there is.

If ever there is
other than war, other than where war was, if ever there is.

If ever there is no war, no more war, no other than us where war was, where it was.

No more war, dear brother,
no more, no more war
if ever there is.

"If Ever There Is" is a setting of "John's Song," by American poet Robert Creeley (1926-2005). The poem has a dedication to the poet John Taggart; the style of wordplay and repetition here can also be found in Taggart's poetry. I hear it as a prayer for peace. In 1967 Creeley signed a "Writers and Editors War Tax Protest," an ad in which over 500 vowed to protest the Vietnam War by refusing to pay a 10% war tax. "If Ever There Is," is entirely derived from the opening melody, made up of seconds and thirds; these intervals are almost exclusively used as the work unfolds. In the first half of the piece, the choir works together, sounding an insistent plea. In the second half, the parts move more independently. We move from minor to major as the voices dream of a time when we can experience life without war.

The composer would like to express his gratitude to Vocalessence, Philip Brunelle and Francisco Núñez for their input and support in the development this work during the Essentially Choral program.
